

Test 11

A two-year-old child was hospitalized with a mother's complaint of a fever of 38.8°C and a barking cough that occurred during sleep. Objectively, the child is restless, pale, and has inspiratory dyspnea. Auscultation of decreased breathing is heard. Respiratory rate is 46/min, heart rate is 120/min, blood pressure is 80/40 mm Hg. What is the most likely diagnosis?

➡ Topic 9. Acute and chronic diseases of the larynx.

Test 11

A two-year-old child was hospitalized with a mother's complaint of a fever of 38.8°C and a barking cough that occurred during sleep. Objectively, the child is restless, pale, and has inspiratory dyspnea. Auscultation of decreased breathing is heard. Respiratory rate is 46/min, heart rate is 120/min, blood pressure is 80/40 mm Hg. What is the most likely diagnosis?

- ➡ Quincke's angioedema
- ➡ Bronchial asthma attack
- ➡ Acute bronchitis
- ➡ Foreign body of the lower respiratory tract

Test 11

A two-year-old child was hospitalized with a mother's complaint of a fever of 38.8°C and a barking cough that occurred during sleep. Objectively, the child is restless, pale, and has inspiratory dyspnea. Auscultation of decreased breathing is heard. Respiratory rate is 46/min, heart rate is 120/min, blood pressure is 80/40 mm Hg. What is the most likely diagnosis?

➡ Acute stenosing laryngotracheitis